Location and Centre

Oxford is home to the world famous Oxford University, the oldest university in the English speaking world, with teaching of some form being offered as early as 1096. Since then it has grown into one of the world's most celebrated universities, and has given the city a uniquely scholarly atmosphere. A range of academic wonders can be found scattered throughout the city, including medieval college buildings, museums, galleries and bookshops.

Staying residentially at Brasenose, an Oxford University college located between the High Street and the Bodleian library, students have unrivalled access to one of the most highly regarded educational institutions on the planet. As a result of the dynamic tuition, participations on these programmes refine their social eloquence and mastery in the specificity of the English language.

The Oxford College Experience at Brasenose offers ambitious and motivated 14-17 year olds the opportunity to prepare for an aspirational, professional future environment through skill-based workshops, field trips and case study analyses.

There comes a distinct stage in every language journey where a firm foundation has been laid and it becomes pertinent to refine the delivery of the language to perfectly represent the speaker's unique individuality. The Oxford College for Teenagers breaks with conventional language teaching methods to offer a programme that goes beyond what is expected, fully preparing students for University and their professional future.

Morning lessons focus largely on the skills required to study at an English university, including developing appropriate writing styles for a variety of relevant situations. Afternoon sessions are subject-focused, exploring a topic of choice through the media of lectures, case studies and group project work.
